Reaver's ransom, by Emily Diamand

Lilly Melkun is out fishing with her seacat when the bloodthirsty reavers come raiding—and kidnap the Prime Minister's daughter. When Lilly's village is blamed for the kidnapping, she sets out to find the girl. Off she sails with a ransom—an extraordinary talking jewel. Nothing can prepare her for what happens next.

Psycho cat, by Derek Hansen

A humorous collection of short stories, about cats, for cat lovers and haters alike. They're killers. They're terrorists. They're vandals. And so darn cute and cuddly you want to take them to bed. Man has a long and pathetic history of pandering to cats. A million years ago, they had us for dinner. Now they have us for fools, take advantage of our generosity, our forgiveness, our patience, and nab the best spot in front of the heater. Why do we stroke their beautiful necks and not wring them? Love them or loathe them, once you read this book you'll never look at cats the same way again.

A Mango-shaped space, by Wendy Maas

Afraid that she is crazy, thirteen-year-old Mia, who sees a special colour with every letter, number, and sound, keeps this a secret until she becomes overwhelmed by school, changing relationships, and the death of her beloved cat, Mango.

City of a thousand dolls, by Miriam Foster

Nisha lives in the City of a Thousand Dolls, a remote estate where orphan girls in the Empire become apprentices as musicians, healers, and courtesans, her closest companions the mysterious cats that trail her shadow. When girls begin to die, Nisha begins to uncover the secrets that surround the deader—jeopardizing not only her own future within the City but her own life.

Into the wild, by Erin Hunter

As prophesized, a young house cat becomes an apprentice warrior in a clan of wild cats, where he faces many dangers and treachery both within and outside of his new clan.

First book in series

Psycho cat, by Derek Hansen

A humorous collection of short stories, about cats, for cat lovers and haters alike. They're killers. They're terrorists. They're vandals. And so darn cute and cuddly you want to take them to bed. Man has a long and pathetic history of pandering to cats. A million years ago, they had us for dinner. Now they have us for fools, take advantage of our generosity, our forgiveness, our patience, and nab the best spot in front of the heater. Why do we stroke their beautiful necks and not wring them? Love them or loathe them, once you read this book you'll never look at cats the same way again.

Short stories; Senior fiction

The cat at the wall, by Deborah Ellis

If you were given a second chance at life, would you have the courage to do the right thing? A captivating novel set on the West Bank. The Cat at the Wall combines Ellis’s respected and unflinching realism, with a hint of engaging magic.

A Mango-shaped space, by Wendy Maas

Afraid that she is crazy, thirteen-year-old Mia, who sees a special colour with every letter, number, and sound, keeps this a secret until she becomes overwhelmed by school, changing relationships, and the death of her beloved cat, Mango.

A Mango-shaped space, by Wendy Maas

If you were given a second chance at life, would you have the courage to do the right thing? A captivating novel set on the West Bank. The Cat at the Wall combines Ellis’s respected and unflinching realism, with a hint of engaging magic.

The poetical cat: an anthology, by Robert Clyde Anderson

An anthology of poems about cats.

Non-fiction