Indonesia

The coat of arms is the Garuda Pancasila, composed of a Garuda, a large mythical bird, and heraldic shield.

The sections of the shield represent the five Pancasila principles.

The red and white horizontal sections of the garuda refer to the five elements of the Pancasila:

- Garuda, the national emblem
- Pancasila, the national philosophy
- Kartika, the national symbol
- Dharma, the national value
- Bhumi, the national land

The sections of the shield represent the five Pancasila principles:

- Kartika
- Pancasila
- Dharma
- Bhumi
- Garuda

The red and white horizontal sections of the garuda refer to the five elements of the Pancasila.

The Polish flag has the red and white stripes in the center, with a golden emblem on the left and the coat of arms on the right.

The Indonesian flag is very similar to the Polish flag, but the colors are reversed.

The Indonesian flag is adopted from the Netherlands.

Indonesia became independent from the Netherlands in 1945.
