A brush-tailed possum

Possums

Possums have been known to attack sheep, which often get into yards and yards and yards and yards of possums in New Zealand, and they eat food and destroy their habitat. They eat the most of the species, and native animals from Australia in the 1980s, non-native animals.

The Kea is a very smart bird.

The Kea is a parrot with a huge hooked beak.

Kiwis

Kiwis

Kiwis are close to the coast. They are found in the New Zealand waters of New Zealand.

Many of New Zealand's animals and plants are found nowhere else in the world. There are no snakes living in New Zealand.
The Silver Fern

A silver fern (Costus) close to the Silver Fern. Silver ferns are found in the damp, shady conditions of misty forests.

Southern beech trees

Southern beech trees are found on the sides of mountains in both the South and North Islands. Their学名 is known to mean "god of the forest." It is more common in the south, while the tree is called "kauri" in the north. The kauri is one of the largest and most productive of New Zealand's native trees.

Kauri trees

Kauri trees are found in New Zealand's North Island. These trees are very few in number but are important for their timber. Their学名 is derived from "Kauri," which means "corpse."